

Adobe Certified Associate Program

The Visual Media Technology department has an agreement with Adobe and Certiport to provide testing and certification on the FCC campus.

You can become a Certified Associate by enrolling in the course: GRC300A, preparing for testing in any number of Adobe Products and satisfactorily completing the appropriate exam(s).

Adding an industry certification to your portfolio is a very good career move, and you can't beat the convenience of doing this while you are on campus. If you apply for a job in the graphics industry and tell a potential employer that you have software skills, that should be obvious through your project work. However, if the software manufacturer endorses your entry-level skill you are much more credible.

Please realize that this course allows you access to practice tests and the opportunity to take the test(s). There is no software instruction involved in GRC300A.

Check with the department chair, Carolyn DeAnda for additional information about the program. carolyn.deanda@fresnocitycollege.edu is her email address.
